SPRINGTIME FLITTINGS BRING MANY CHANGES

List of Movings in Bellefonte is Practically Complete.

KEPT DRAYMEN BUSY

The list of springtime flittings in Bellefonte and over the county is about ended for this season and indicates about the usual number of changes. In a number of instances families were disappointed and could get no place while in other instances several families have occupied the same house and others have moved from town. The list as gleaned by "The Republican" is practically complete and is as follows:

H. F. Toland, from apartments on High St., near the Y. M. C. A., to Pleasant Gap. These apartments, formerly occupied by Dr. J. M. Caldwell, dentist, have been rented by J. K. Johnston, who will be obliged to vacate the law offices he has been in for many years, as that building will be razed to make way for a new structure under ownership of J. O. Heverly. Arthur C. Dale, his father and uncle, will also vacate their law offices in the Heverly building and will have offices in the property on High St. which was recently purchased from Mrs. H. M. Hiller by J. Howard Thompson.

Others who have rented in the Hiller building are: Dr. Shuster, first floor offices to right; Miss Helen Valentine, rear of first floor for "The Last Resort Tea Room;" second floor apartments by James Craig and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cairns. Miss Valentine is also planning to use the side yard of this property as a tea garden during the summer months. The small room on South Allegheny St., which she had occupied, has been rented to Joseph and Anthony Compani, who will reside in it. Their mother, Mrs. Katie Compani, has made sale of her household goods and is planning to go to Philadelphia to stay with relatives. The Compani property has been occupied by the Sweitzer family of Valentine St.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith, who had been living with the Cairns', has leased the Keichline property on East Bishop St., vacated by J. T. Zeigler, who has moved into the property on Reynolds Ave., which he purchased during the winter. The Emerick property on Spring St., vacated by Cairns and Smiths, has been leased to Mr. Charleston, an employe of the Emerick Motor Bus Co. The Charlestons vacated the C. T. Gerberich property on North Thomas St., which in turn has been occupied by the L. H. Gettig family.

Mr. Gettig made a trade around with John Garbrick, even money, the former acquiring the Gerberich property which had been purchased by Mr. Garbrick, and the latter moving into the property on Bishop St.

Mr. and Mrs. Leif Olsen vacated their apartments in Petrikin Hall, rented by Miss Caroline Harper, who will give up her apartments in the Crider Exchange. Olsens moved into their property on Curtin St. which they purchased from Carl Weaver. Mr. and Mrs. Weaver will be at the Brockerhoff House.

Henry Cobb and family vacated the McKee property and moved to the other side of High St. into the house recently vacated by the Mannings, who have leased furnished rooms from Augustus Heverly, and will spend a part of their time in Bellefonte. The side of the McKee property vacated by the Cobb family is occupied by Mrs. Howard Barnes and family, who recently acquired possession of this double house.

W. H. Miller and wife purchased from A. C. Mingle the property between Bishop and Logan Sts. and will occupy the house vacated by the Barnes family.

Miss Alice Tate's furniture was moved from the apartment she has occupied in the Strickland building and into the rooms formerly occupied by Charles Fromm, in the Bailey property on Bishop St., which was used as an ice cream and lunch business, Mr. Fromm retiring from this little venture. Sim Baum and family have moved into the Allegheny St. side of the property on the corner of Curtin and Allegheny Sts., recently purchased from Mrs. W. F. Reeder. The part of the house fronting on Curtin St. is rented to Robert Morris and family. The property on Bishop St., vacated by the Baum family, will be occupied by the family of Mrs. Peter Smith.

Chas. R. Beatty will vacate the Episcopal Parish House, which he is temporarily occupying and move into the property on East Curtin St., which was recently purchased from Mrs. Grace Garman.

BUSINESS IN COUNCIL

Routine Matters Quickly Disposed of on Monday Evening.

In the absence of John S. Walker, president of the Borough Council, Darius Waite was elected president pro tem.

Benjamin Shaffer was present and asked that Council plan to provide water in their home on Valentine St., as well as putting water in two other homes on the same street, Mr. Shaffer saying these three houses were the only ones on Valentine St. that did not have town water. This was referred to the water committee.

A copy of the contract proposed by the State Highway Department to cover use and payment at the rate of $150 per month for the use of the borough street roller until July 1 was referred back to J. D. Seibert, borough manager, to get the dates properly arranged.

Routine reports were made by the street, water and fire and police committees.

Complaint was made of the dangerous condition of an old barn on the James Clark property, just north of Howard St. near Penn, and this was referred to the street committee, borough engineer and borough solicitor.

Robt. F. Hunter then brought to the attention of Council his proposed plan of putting in a gas plant in Bellefonte which is covered in another article in this issue.

Mr. Seibert said the pipe for Snyder's section of sewer line had been ordered, but was not here yet, He also said the property owners who wanted an extension of about 400 feet of sewer line east on Pike alley had readily agreed to pay cash for the improvement as to their share and for a tap as soon as the work was done. He said this pipe was also ordered.

He said the persons interested in the new water line in Coleville were to hold a meeting on Tuesday evening and the iron pipe for this project and an extension on West Bishop St. to the Hughes memorial swimming pool would require about 6,000 feet all told at an approximate cost of 76 cents per foot; that he was advised iron pipe would advance in price and a purchase to cover the borough needs should be made early. Definite action was postponed pending decision by the Coleville residents.

MRS. ED. SWEITZER INJURED

Condition at Hospital is Said to Be Favorable.

Mrs. Edward Sweitzer was seriously injured on Saturday when she was struck by an automobile driven by A. R. McNitt. Mr. McNitt was not driving fast and soon stopped his car, rendering all the assistance possible and getting the young women to the hospital without delay. She was unconscious and had bled from the mouth and ears so that the worst was feared, but it is pleasing to note she has responded to treatment and her condition is reported good at this time.

Mrs. Sweitzer has been residing with her grandmother, Mrs. James Miller, at the Forge. She was walking across the concrete road when Mr. McNitt was driving out from town and apparently became confused, crossing the road and then starting back, stepping directly in the path of the car. The accident was said to be unavoidable and much regretted by Mr. McNitt.

ROB'T F. HUNTER TELLS PLAN FOR NEW GAS CO.

Briefly Outlined Project Before Council Monday Evening.

INDIVIDUAL OPERATION

Robt. F. Hunter, one of Bellefonte's well-known promoters who has a reputation for doing things that appeal to him to be worthwhile, briefly outlined to those at the regular meeting of Council on Monday evening his plan to establish a new and modern gas heating and lighting plant in Bellefonte. He said he had been making a study of the proposition for about six months and had consulted with a well-known and able gas engineer, a Mr. Murphy, of the Penna. Power & Light Co., and a personal friend. Mr. Murphy, he said, would be in Bellefonte this week to go over the local situation with him and to inspect the abandoned steam heating works and gas plant. Mr. Hunter said:

"I want to bring this matter to Council frankly. I do not want to take the attitute of being against the proposition that one man furnish $25,000 toward providing a capital of $100,000 to rejuvenate the old gas plant if local capital will invest $75,000, but I know and you know that the trouble with the old plant was too much watered stock and it seems to me this would be the condition to be again if a stock company is formed. I do not believe that the equipment for the pipe-line of the abandoned plant is of much value.

"I have gone over the matter carefully and my plan is to put the pipe-lines in the alleys and to go through the back yards to the houses. This would prevent tearing up the streets and be less expensive as to keeping up. I do not think the pipe lines of the old gas company could be used.

"I would like to know if Council would arrange to have the franchise of the old gas company vacated and would grant me a new franchise. I do not want an exclusive franchise and this would not be legal if I did. But we all know that two gas companies would not pay in Bellefonte. However, we do need one good gas plant for the welfare of the community and I believe that one man who can scrape up the money to handle it himself can make it pay.

"I do not think the gas business is a bonanza. I think it would be a losing proposition for the investor and the public if a stock company should undertake it. But I do think I can handle it as my own, with my own investment, give it my time and attention and make it pay for myself. I am also considering the condition and outlook for a gas plant in another town in Centre County.

"My plan is to put in a modern gas manufacturing plant that uses anthracite coal and fuel oil. This gives good results, a gas of standard quality for heating and lighting purposes. Manufacturing gas from coal is too expensive to be considered."

Mr. Hunter's plan sounded feasible and Council did not look with disfavor on the project. However, it was referred to the special committee to investigate and make a report on as is done in all matters of such importance.

Diphtheria Week.

Dr. J. Bruce McCreary, of the State department of health, Harrisburg, will address the Patent-Teacher's meeting in the High school room next Monday evening, the 9th, at 8 o'clock on "How to Prevent and Control Diphtheria." Perhaps no other physician in the State has devoted more time to the study of this disease, during the past several years, than Dr. McCreary. What he will say will be interesting to listen to and may be the means of your saving the life of some member of the family.

Rummage Sale May 1st.

The annual rummage sale for the benefit of the Bellefonte hospital will be held at the Undine Fire Co. building on Tuesday, May 1. All persons having any articles to be contributed for the sale are requested to send them to the Undine Fire Co. building at any time up until the day of the sale. A room has been set aside in the building in which contributed articles may be stored.

Hurt by Motor-cycle.

Charles Nelo, of Bellefonte, was painfully injured by a motor-cycle last Thursday. He was admitted to the local hospital and an x ray taken on Friday. This disclosed that his most serious injury was a fracture of the left arm and he was discharged from the hospital on Saturday.

FIRE BURNED HOUSE AS FIREMEN SOUGHT BLAZE

Rice Property Gutted by Flames on Sunday Afternoon.

TWO FAMILIES HOMELESS

The frame dwelling house on Pine St. occupied by Mrs. Gammill Rice and family one one side and by Harper Rice and family on the other side, was gutted by flames on Sunday afternoon. A brisk wind from the southwest carried clouds of smoke across the town and several other houses in the path of the wind were threatened by the fire, but the firemen, both the Undine and Logan companies, reached the scene in time to prevent the flames from spreading and to keep the house from burning to the ground.

Lack of information as to where the fire was located, mixing Penn St. for Pine St. when giving directions, caused a loss of time in which the firemen went to other sections of the town to locate the blaze before discovering where it was at, made the loss more as the flames swept through the rooms unchecked. This is to be regretted. Some action should be taken to prevent a recurrence, and a plan put into effect that will give the firemen a definite location when their services are so urgently needed.

The fire is said to have started from an overheated stove on Mrs. Gammil Rice's side, and had a good start before it was discovered. The property was owned by Mrs. Gammil Rice and it was insured for $1,200 and her furniture for $600. Harper Rice carried no insurance and his loss, due to damaged furniture, is keenly felt. The entire loss is estimated roughly at $3,000

Both families are homeless as a result of the blaze, but kind friends have arranged that they may share their homes until repairs have been made to the house and it is ready to occupy again.

RAID AT ALTOONA STATION

State Police and Aids Search Grips as Passengers Alight.

As a result of a move upon the part of authorities to stop the transportation of liquor by passengers on the railroad, Sargeant D. H. Austin of the state police and constable James Delaney, assisted by a squad of state and railrosd officers, on Saturday night conducted a raid at the Altoona passenger station, taking in custody Casper Orr and John Begg, white; William Coxam, Allie Parks and Horace Frisby, colored. All had liquor in their possession.

It had been known for some time the men were in the habit of going to the towns on the mountain, returning with quantities of illicit liquor in their possession for sale in Altoona and with the authority given by the new Snyder law, it was decided to act promptly.

During the evening the officers assembled in the train sheds and when the accommodation from the west came in at 8:15 o'clock, suspected persons were stopped as they alighted from the train, with the result that Orr and the three colored men were taken in custody. Begg was taken as he got off a midnight train.

About fifteen men were stopped, but all except the five were allowed to go when they voluntarily showed that their luggage contained no liquor. The officers had no warrants, so that no forcible attempts to search were made. The five arrested were suspected of engaging in transporting and a special watch was kept for them.

All used some device for concealing the quart and pint bottles under their clothing. Parks had a belt arrangement to hold them against his chest. All told more than six gallons of corn and rye moonshine whiskey was seized from those arrested. They were taken before Alderman H. C. McClellan and held for court. Orr furnished security and the others were taken to jail.

David Gingery was arrested as he stepped from a train at Tyrone station on Sunday morning at 12:45 o'clock and was charged with violating the Snyder enforcement law. It is said he had a number of pockets in his clothing in which he had concealed four quarts and one pint of moonshine, secured west of Tyrone at some point along the line. He was held for a hearing.

DEVELOPING ELECTRIC SYSTEM

Keystone Power Corporation Took a Step Forward.

The Keystone Power Corporation with electric lines throughout Centre County took another step forward last week in developing its super power system to serve the territory from Blair county north to the state line, which includes Centre, Clinton, Cameron, McKean and Potter counties.

Attorneys for the Keystone corporation presented application for the approval of the incorporation of the Austin Electric Co., Keating Twp. Electric Co., Homer Twp. Electric Co., Sylvania Twp. Electric Co., Portage Twp. Electric Co., Eulalia Twp. Electric Co., Roulett Twp. Electric Co., all of Potter County, and the Sargeant Twp. Electric Co. and Norwich Twp. Electric Co., of McKean County.

The applications were not opposed. Plans are to merge those companies into the Keystone Power Co. which has plants at Kane, Ridgway and Milesburg.

In addition to the territory which will be added to the Keystone field by these applications, the company now serves the following counties and townships:

McKean—Wetmore and Hamlin.

Elk—Highland, Jones, Ridgway, Benzinger, Horton, Fox, Jay, Benezette.

Cameron—Shippen, Lumber, Grove and Gibson.

Clinton—East Keating, West Keating.

Centre—Taylor, Worth, Huston, Union, Boggs, Howard, Liberty, Beech Creek, Half Moon, Patton, Benner, Spring, Marion, Walker, Porter, Lamar, Ferguson, College, Harris, Potter, Gregg, Penn, Miles, Haines.

JUDGE QUIGLEY BOOKED FOR BUSY WEEK AHEAD

Snow Shoe Intersection Bridge Case to Be Argued Tuesday.

ESCAPED PRISONER UP

Judge Quigley will have a busy week ahead of him if present indications are rightly observed. On Tuesday there will be Argument Court, and a special sessions of Court on next Wednesday. A number of desertion and non-support cases are scheduled for Wednesday and other business may come up at that time.

One of the most interesting cases to be argued is that regarding the ownership of the bridge spanning Bald Eagle creek in Boggs Township at Snow Shoe Intersection and leading to the recently built Mason's camp, as well as the homes of some ten or twelve families residing on the mountain side south of the stream. This bridge was washed away at the abutments and collapsed several years ago. It has been a source of argument at various times in the intervening period.

At one time, it is alleged, the township road supervisors made an attempt to proceed and followed the legal custom of getting an estimate and plans from the State Highway department. The plans called for a bridge at an estimated cost of $15,000. It was further said, that a bridge could have been secured and moved from Rockview about that time for $1,500 but that this proposition was not taken up and the plans of the State Highway department seemed out of the reach of the available funds.

The case to be heard on Tuesday is a mandamus proceeding brought by George Summers, a citizen of Boggs Township, one of those residing on the mountain side and being placed to disadvantage since the bridge collapsed. This proceeding may prove expensive, such generally being the case, but it would enable those desiring the bridge to have it built at the expense of the county if they are successful in proving that the county owns the bridge. The County Commissioners, who are the defendants in the case, will attempt to show that the bridge in question is not a county bridge and that they are not responsible for its upkeep or replacement.

At a special session of Court held by Judge Quigley yesterday morning, Harry Hunsicker, of Carbon County, who escaped from Rockview prison last Friday morning and was caught again at McAlevy's Fort, near the Centre-Huntingdon county line on Saturday, pleaded guilty to escaping and was given the usual sentence as required by law.

Hunsicker was closely questioned by Judge Quigley, who generally is well informed on the prisoner who faces him on such occasions, and there was an unusual tinge to the hearing. Hunsicker said he was 33 years old and married, that he came here last fall from the Eastern penitentiary and had been anxious to return home. He is illiterate and had worked on the homestead farm, in Carbon County, according to his story, and the farm was to be his destination, where he would see his mother, who resides there with another son, to whom the farm was sold by the mother.

"Well, how did you get into this trouble that got you into the Eastern penitentiary?" queried Judge Quigley.

"I had a man arrested for beating his horses with a blacksnake and there was a trial at the Justice of the Peace office. Then the man had me arrested and I was convicted of perjury," was the reply.

"Then you didn't tell the truth?"

"Yes sir, I told the truth."

The prisoner could make no further explanation but his answers appeared to be sincere. "I have just come from facing real criminals," said Judge Quigley, "and you don't look to me like a criminal. Yet I cannot understand why Judge Barbour would sentence you for perjury if your story is correct."

Fred B. Healy, of the Rockview institution, was then asked as to the behaviour of the prisoner while he was at Rockview and the answers given indicated that there was no fault in his action excepting that he had set a very bad example by walking away.

"I feel sorry for you," said the Judge to the prisoner. "You had less than a year to serve and if nobody comes to your rescue you will now have about five years. I will write to Judge Barbour and will investigate the cause for your criminal conviction. We will try to help you if your story is correct. The sentence of the Court is that you pay a fine of $1, costs of prosecution and you are sentenced to not less than two years nor more than three years in the Western penitentiary, to be served at the completion of the original sentence."

WHAT IS LOVE?

"What is love?" I asked the moon;
A full-moon that sang of romance;
And the full-moon answered:
"Love's the spirit of trees and flowers,
Love's the song of mild April showers,
Love's the land of castles and towers;
That's what love is, my son."

"What is love?" I asked of the winds;
Winds that were moaning and sharp;
And the sharp winds answered:
"Love's the help that comes from the strong,
Love's the hope that battles the throng,
Love's the vision that cheers with a song;
That's what love is, my son."

"What is love?" I asked of the sun;
A sun full of passion and warmth;
And the warm sun answered:
"Love's the call of the flesh that demands,
Love's the message of warm clinging hands,
Love's the caress hot as hot desert sands;
That's what love is, my son."

FEW 'APOSTLE SPOONS' LEFT

Only Two Complete Sets of Ancient British Plate Are Known to Be in Existence.

The most ancient piece of hall-marked British plate in existence is the spoon.

In the reign of Edward IV, the spoon is mentioned in English literature. Apostle spoons came into fashion during Edward V's time and became very fashionable as christening presents.

Until the time of the commonwealth it became the custom for well-to-do godfathers and godmothers to give a child a complete set of these spoons, or less, according to their means. With the poorer classes the child very often got only one silver spoon, with a figure of his patron saint or that of the giver.

There are only two complete sets of thirteen apostle spoons in existence now. One is owned by the Goldsmith's company and the other is in the possession of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge.

In both these sets Our Lord is represented, but not Judas Iscariot; his place is taken in one set by Paul and in the other by Matthew.

The oldest hall-marked apostle spoon that is known to be in existence was made in 1493.

It does not seem to be the fashion to present them any more at christenings. The custom dwindled at the time of the Puritans, who were great image-breakers.

Letter Oddly Recovered.

The chief distributor of old clothes for refugees in Rodosto, a young woman from Tennessee, received two bales of clothing through the relief commission in Constantinople from her home town. A few days after the distribution a man appeared at the relief station with a letter which he gave the young woman. To her complete astonishment she found it was a letter that had been written to her father in Tennessee, twenty years ago, and the refugee, clothed from the "old clothes bag from America," had found it in his trousers' pocket.

Youngster Battled Burglar.

A fifteen-year-old Ohio boy is recovering from injuries suffered in an encounter with a burglar. Due to the fact that the burglar had whiskers, there was nothing stolen. The boy surprised the man in the kitchen and a fight resulted. The thief struck the boy repeatedly, who grabbed his whiskers and held on until a final blow knocked him unconscious. Then the burglar became frightened and fled. The boy was revived by his dog licking his hands. The dog had given the alarm when the thief first entered.

Not His Time to Die.

Said to have jumped over the East Cliff at Ramsgate, England, at a point where the cliff is 85 feet high, a young soldier of the R. A. F., was committed for trial on a charge of attempting to commit suicide. The youth said he acted in a fit of temper, and that he suffered from the shock of being knocked over by a bomb in 1915. There is no recorded case of any other person, after jumping over the Ramsgate cliffs, remaining alive.

Freak Had Short Life.

Recently a lamb was born in Quebec that was all misformed. The ears were under its neck; its throat outside of the skin and its mouth was like that of a fish. The animal died a few hours after birth.

STUDENTS VISITED ALTOONA

Class of Thirty from Penn State Studied City Plants.

Thirty members of the Senior class of the Pennsylvania State College visited Altoona last Friday and had a very interesting round of inspection of plants and operations. From Altoona they went to Cresson, thence to Pittsburgh.

The students were members of the engineering department. They visited the Altoona sewage and garbage disposal plants. City Engineer E. J. Baum accompanied them. The tour was made in a bus and with cars generously furnished by the Franklin-Dale Co. and Linn A. Brua, Jr. The first trip was to the garbage incinerator in East Altoona. It was not in operation, but the students were shown the construction and methods of operation.

At the sewage disposal plant, which was nearby, they were shown the practical operation of the Imhoff tanks. Mr. Baum had the plans that were followed in the construction and these were explained to the young engineers.

They were also shown the irrigation beds at Canan station. Here they were given instruction as to how sewage is purified. They started at the screen house, where floating material is removed, then the methods of charging the beds was explained and they were shown where the sewage comes out cleansed along the stream in underdrains.

W. A. Hoyt and Mr. Kirk, engineers, showed them the methods of concrete construction work being used in the erection of the new Altoona Junior High school building and a new building being put up for Brett's store.

Faith Clarke's Career

By JANE OSBORN

(©, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was the first time in Faith Clarke's career as stenographer in the Gage Manufacturing company that she had been late. Her small purse had slipped from her numbed fingers on her way from the Blair Street Home to the corner where she customarily took the bus. She had retraced her steps, but the rapidly falling snow had hidden the place where it had fallen. So Faith Clarke went her way, on foot, punching the time-clock in the entrance to indicate a half hour's tardiness.

As soon as she had taken her seat in the room where nine other stenographers worked and had opened her typewriter desk to begin transcribing notes from dictation taken from one of the salesmen late the previous afternoon, Faith was aware of the fact that something of unusual interest was in the air.

"Better powder your nose and look alive," said the girl at the next desk. "He's coming in this morning to look us over."

"Just my luck," sighed the girl at the desk on the other side, looking into the tiny mirror on the cover of her vanity case. "The snow got on my hair and took out all the wave, and I've got on my oldest dress. I should worry!"

Eventually Faith Clarke pieced together the information that Thomas Gage, Jr., son of "the big boss," had arrived. He had previously had charge of the western plant of the concern, but had now come to assume control of the main office and would need a private secretary, and had announced that he would choose one from the stenographers already employed.

He is coming to look us over. Jimmy overheard him telling Mr. Mills. Then he will pick out the one that he thinks looks the best. It will mean thirty dollars a week to the girl that suits—"

Faith kept on with her work and carefully rolled a sheet of letterhead paper into her typewriter. Apparently she was not especially interested. "It isn't likely he'd pick me," she murmured.

"Oh, I don't know," consoled the neighbor at the left. "You've got a fine record. You've got more speed than any of the rest of us and you're terribly accurate. Those things count. Though, of course, he's young and fine looking and will probably pick a good looker."

Faith Clarke sighed again and opened her notebook to begin the monotonous day's work.

For an hour little work was done. The buzzing of voices was incessant, and there were frequent pauses in work for powdering of noses and readjustment of hairnets. Then a hush suddenly fell on the room, for the door had opened and Mr. Mills, office manager, with a tall, keen-eyed stranger, entered the room.

Never had the stenographers' room of the Gage Manufacturing company hummed with such incessant clicking of the typewriters, and never before were ten heads bent in such keen attention to work. Mr. Mills and the stranger stood talking in subdued tones, but obviously the stranger was making observations. Then they left the room and the door closed. For four or five minutes more the typewriter keys buzzed furiously, and then came a lull.

"Gosh!" said the girl at Faith's left.

"Gee whiz!" said the one at her right.

"Isn't the suspense something awful?" said a girl across the room. "How soon do you think he'll let us know?"

After the noon lunch hour the girls took their places promptly. And then Molly Day, who had found the suspense so trying, was called to Mr. Gage's office. She stopped in the dressing room for a careful reapplication of rouge and lipstick and went into the sanctum with confidence gained thereby.

"Honest, I wasn't a bit scared," she announced when she came back. "I had my hair waved instead of getting lunch when I was out and that kind of braced me up. Gosh, but I'm hungry now, though. Well, I'll treat you all when I get my thirty a week, girls."

But presently a surprise came.

Jimmy, the office boy, came in with a message to Faith Clarke. She was wanted in Mr. Gage's office, and she departed at once, without even looking in a mirror. Her throat was dry and her knees were trembling.

"Poor kid!" said one of the girls. "I suppose he's looked up her record, but, gosh, what does a good record do when a girl doesn't keep up appearances?"

In spite of dry throat and trembling knees Faith Clarke took a trial letter from Mr. Gage with lightning rapidity and transcribed it in an adjoining office without a fault.

She waited while Mr. Gage read it over. He was consulting her record for promptness and accuracy on a large pink card from the filing room.

"I think, Miss Clarke," he said, "that you may consider yourself advanced to the position as my private secretary. It is an advancement, because it will mean thirty-five dollars a week, and you are now, I believe, getting eighteen. Of course, this is to be confidential for a day or so." He paused to look keenly into the delicately featured face of the girl who sat at the other side of his desk.

"I am sorry," Faith said slowly, "but I—if you don't very much mind, I'd rather not. I may have taken that letter quickly, but really I know I wouldn't do at all. I'm very careless and I'd much rather stay in the other room with eighteen a week."

Mr. Gage saw that the matter was settled so far as the girl was concerned. After all, she had a right to refuse the offer if she chose, and perhaps a girl so unambitious as to wish to refuse such an advancement would not make a good secretary. Still, he had been attracted to her the moment he entered the stenographer's room. It was only on the recommendation of Mr. Mills that he had tried the other girl out first, and had found her lacking in speed and accuracy, as well as in what Mr. Gage considered suitable personality.

So that was the end of that, and Mr. Gage decided to put off for another day the choosing of a private secretary. That evening after close of the office he felt the need of exercise, and in spite of the dreary weather, with thawing snow of the morning underfoot and gray skies above, he walked for several miles in the direction of the hotel that was his temporary abode. As he walked he could think of nothing but the case of Faith Clarke. Why had she declined his offer? Why would any girl decline $35 instead of $18? Mr. Gage made up his mind to solve the problem.

His meditations were suddenly interrupted, when his downcast eyes fell upon a small purse lying on the sidewalk before him. It was half covered with snow; apparently it had recently been exposed. Mr. Gage picked it up and opened it. It contained $2.45 and a key attached to a wooden tag marked "Room 99, Blair Street Home." Mr. Gage asked the policeman at the next corner where the Blair Street Home might be, and was directed to a boarding home for girls a few blocks away.

It was a dingy place inside and out, and the high unshaded gas lights in the hall did little to dispel the outside gloom. He asked the attendant at the desk whether she would take the purse, to which the attendant mechanically reached out to a cumbersome electric press button and rang nine times and then nine times more. "I've sent for ninety-nine," said the attendant wearily, "I'd rather have you give it to her yourself."

Mr. Gage sat waiting on a narrow uncomfortable black walnut bench in the hall and presently, to his surprise, appeared in the gloom Faith Clarke—the girl about whom he had been thinking for the past half-hour.

"Are you ninety-nine?" he asked rising, and then, "I didn't expect to find you here, Mis Clarke, still I am very glad that I did."

Explanations concerning the loss and finding of the purse were soon over. Mr. Gage lingered, sitting there beside Miss Clarke in the dingy hall. He told her that he felt this a good opportunity to try to persuade her to accept his offer. "I am quite sure you can do the work satisfactorily and I should think that the increase from eighteen to thirty-five dollars a week would make up for the additional responsibility. That must be an inducement."

Faith Clarke looked about her and then back to Mr. Gage.

"You see," she said, "this is home to me. It's the only home I've known since I left my uncle's in the country and that wasn't at all happy. It's a working girls' home—the rule is that no girl earning more than twenty dollars a week can live here. I left one place because they raised my wages—that was when I went to Gage's; and now—don't you see what it means to me? If I accept your proposition I would have to leave this home. It would break my heart."

Thomas Gage, Jr., felt something very much like a lump in his throat, at the thought that this dingy place, with its odors of sanctity and poor cooking, could mean so much to any one. His own home life had been so happy—perhaps he had never quite appreciated it.

"Still, I'd like to do your work," Faith admitted. "It would be so much more interesting. Would you let me do the work with the same salary?"

Thomas Gage looked perplexed, and then suddenly he laughed a little and held out his hand. "It's a go, Miss Clarke. We'll make it twenty a week and they'll still let you stay here."

If was there in that dingy hall that Thomas Gage made up his mind that he would probably woo Faith Clarke as his wife. "A girl who loves home as much as that," he assured himself, "ought to make a wonderful wife."

Two months later he asked her to marry him, and, of course, Faith accepted. It was then that she found that there was a little bank account to her credit, showing a weekly saving of $15 a week. "It's yours to do what you want with it," Mr. Gage told her.

"I'm going to give it to the home—maybe they could buy a pleasanter light for the front hall and get a comfortable settee instead of that old black walnut bench."

THE XMAS DAYS

The days were much excited.

"Oh," said Monday, "I can hardly wait." "It will be my turn this year. Of course I had a good time of it last year. But this year the day is really and truly my day."

"I have been waiting for this for quite a few years now."

And that was very true. For Father Week's children, the Days, were talking of the times they each had in the joy of being Xmas.

"I remember," said Tuesday, "that one year I had an especially interesting time. For some time I had seen two little girls giving their dolls Xmas presents.

"One little girl's name was Alice and she made the little friend's doll a small knitted skirt and a cap and a long petticoat and long dress. For the friend's dolly was a baby dolly still in long clothes.

"The friend's name was Margaret. Well, I had not noticed, especially for a number of times, and there was a good long time between each occasion when I appeared for Xmas—whether Alice and Margaret still gave each other presents. For I had heard them say when they were rather grownup that they were going to give each other presents instead of to their dolls.

"I wondered if they still kept it up. And the last time I appeared I had a point of seeing.

"And sure enough, Alice had given Margaret—quite a grownup lady—a lovely little dish with a narcissus bulb in it for her to watch and grow, and Margaret had given Alice a little paper cutter and a chocolate Santa Claus.

"It rejoiced my heart to see them still keeping up the happy Xmas spirit."

"I remember," said Wednesday, "of the last Xmas I was doing duty. Oh, what a day it was. There was a gorgeous sunrise in the morning.

"Now when I speak of the beauties of the day, everyone knows I am not conceited, for it was Old Weather Boy and King Snow and Mr. Sun, and all the other friends who made it so beautiful a day.

"In the afternoon before the sun went down there was a gloriously rich golden amber glow over the snow, and in the very air it seemed.

"Oh, such a gorgeous light as it was, so rich and perfect. And then came a beautiful sunset, and in the evening the stars came out and the Diamond

"All in Readiness."

Brothers, the Sky's own jewelers, you know, and there was the greatest Snow Sparkling Festival there had ever been.

"Some people had a tree out in their yard and on it were red and green and yellow and blue lights, and on top a star was lighted up, too.

"Well, King Snow was anxious to see what was going on. Now, as he came looking about him the lovely robe that he wears dropped some fragments and pieces about, and these flakes of snow fell on the tree.

"How lovely they did make it!

"And everywhere King Snow did the same so that just a little snow was scattered here and there on everything. Such a perfect Xmas as it was!"

"Last year," said Saturday, "it got cold just before Xmas. I remember that it blew up cold and everyone was so pleased.

"And it blew up cold just in time, too."

"Well," said Monday. "I must be all in readiness. Sunday will be coming back now."

"Oh," said the other days, "what fun it will be to hear what Sunday has to tell us, for Sunday has been Xmas Eve this year.

"And when you both get back and start talking of all you have seen and heard what a time we will have."

"And you mustn't do all your talking before I get back," said Tuesday. "We must all hear the Xmas news."

"Oh yes," said Monday, "we will tell you all every bit of Xmas news—but I must be off now. And oh, what joy it will be to be the day again upon which everyone says:

"'Merrie Xmas!'"

Method.

"It is not raining, little boy," said the old gentleman; "why do you carry that umbrella? You don't think it's raining, do you?"

"No, sir!"

"And the sun's not shining."

"No, sir!"

"Then why do you carry it?"

"Well, sir, when it's raining my father carries it."

SET NEW FASHION IN TREES

Example of Lombardy Poplar, Many Years Ago, Has Been Followed in Massachusetts.

Over 200 years a black poplar tree in northern Italy for some reason or another forsook the family habit and elected to grow straight and slender. It was an oddity as it clutched all its branches tightly around its trunk and pointed them all up vertically instead of horizontally. From that tree has been propagated other trees all over the world until the Lombardy poplar has become known to everyone, nearly everywhere. But that tree was a male, as Professor Sargent, a botanical authority, tells us, and so are all Lombardy poplars.

Now in a cemetery in Newton, Mass., a maple has been found with the same curious upright habit, and it may be that we shall have, in the course of time, ornamental sugar-maples, tall, upright and slender, growing as commonly in the world as the Lombardy poplars.

"ICEBERG" HAD NOT PASSED

But the Temperature Lowered Perceptibly in the Immediate Vicinity of Young Ladies' Visitor.

Sister and I were lounging on the vine-covered rear porch in our swimming suits that hot afternoon, occasionally taking a shower under the hose which we had suspended from a hook in the ceiling.

The bell rang and I slipped through the house to see, at the curb, the car of a neighbor who is so correct and formal that we did not care to have her find us in such undignified apparel at that hour.

The bell finally ceased to peal and sister said: "Well, she's gone at last, but I felt cooler since the iceberg passed this way."

And then suddenly we saw her in our midst—she wears rubber heels. "I was asked to return this casserole," said she frigidly, "which was left at the last church dinner. Since there is no one home, I shall leave it on the stairs."

And before we could recover from our surprise she had gone.—Chicago Tribune.

Filed Off Earrings.

Jewelry is forbidden to prisoners in Sing Sing, therefore a prisoner, who pleaded guilty to murder in the sceond degree, was compelled to have his earrings filed off. He shot and killed a man in 1908 and escaped. His arrest in Chicago several weeks ago, after 14 years of search, was due to the earrings. The warden informed him he couldn't wear the earrings when he arrived in Sing Sing. "I've worn them all my life," the prisoner replied. "I can't get them off." Keepers, however, took him into a side room and, with the aid of a file, the rings were removed.

Odd Foster-Parent.

Birds might almost be said to be hereditary enemies of the cat; he looks upon them, like mice, as his legitimate prey. But there is a tomcat, the property of a gentleman at Preston, Lancashire, England, which has constituted itself the foster-parent of a brood of 24 chicks, and stubbornly refuses to leave them. The cat goes everywhere with the chicks, and they have taken kindly to their odd guardian. Hundreds of people have been to see the cat and chickens.

Odd Visitor to Connecticut.

A strange object, resembling half fish and half reptile was caught in the Connecticut river, by members of the biological department of Wesleyan university, who say it is a mud puppy or "hell bender" supposed to inhabit the Mississippi and Ohio rivers and sometimes the Great Lakes. Fishermen claim it is the first ever seen in the Connecticut.

Cows Save Man From Angry Bull.

Saved by his cows when attacked by a stray bull is the extraordinary story that comes from Thold, Flintshire. Finding the bull on his land, the farmer endeavored to turn out the intruder, which charged him and threw him three times. The cows stopped grazing, surrounded the prostrate farmer, and guarded him until help arrived.

MAKES A PERMANENT CHANGE

Why Egg, Once Boiled to Hardness Will Not Soften With a Drop in Temperature.

An egg contains a large proportion of albumen, intended by nature for the nourishment of the growing chick.

This albumen belongs to a class of substances which have the peculiarity of "coagulating" or turning solid when exposed to a certain degree of heat. The action is a permanent chemical change, and these substances will not again soften with a drop in temperature. For this reason, scientists explain, the boiled egg hardens.

It is, too, for this reason that it is impossible to cook an egg on the top of a high mountain, for there, owing to a lesser atmospheric pressure, the water boils at a lower temperature and this temperature being under the "coagulation point" makes it impossible to "cook" an egg.

How Lime Increases Fertility.

That lime or calcium salts increases the fertility of animals has been strikingly shown by the German physiologists Emmerich and Loew, in a recent investigation reported in Umschau (Berlin). They used three groups of mice in their experiments. The first group was given ordinary food; the second received the same with the addition of measured quantities of table salt (sodium chloride), which has also the reputation of increasing fecundity; the third group received corresponding amounts of calcium chloride instead of the sodium chloride. Within a given length of time the three groups bore offspring 23 times, 33 times and 43 times respectively. In spite of the great increase of the number of litters in the third case, the total number of individuals was also greater. At the end of seven months covered by the investigation, the three groups had produced respectively 115, 179 and 262 young.

How a Fish Flies.

Some highly interesting observations on flying fishes have been made by Dr. E. H. Hankin, in the Arabian sea. In still weather the length of a glide was about a meter, with considerable lateral instability; in a light wind this was increased to from 200 to 400 meters. A resemblance between the wing action of soaring vultures and the fin action of the fishes was marked. In both, the wing or fin is inclined upward, the outer part at a higher level than the base, in slow-speed flights, while both show a downward inclination in flight at high speed.

Youth's Lucky Day.

A corset that was used as evidence in four trials in Philadelphia was given to a boy to be burned up after a verdict had been finally reached. It had passed through the hands of numerous lawyers and police officials in their investigations, but it remained for the boy to find $128 concealed in it.

HOW

HEAT IS WASTED THROUGH FAULTY FURNACE SYSTEMS—"In heating houses we really use ten times as much coal as is necessary," Charles P. Steinmetz, research expert for the General Electric company, said recently in a contribution to the coal number issue of the Survey Graphic.

"We could save nine-tenths of it, but we probably will not do so until forced to it by a failing coal supply, for to save would require a radical change in building construction.

"Usually over 90 per cent of all the heat from our furnaces is lost. Although we must replace the foul air with fresh air, there is no reason why we should throw away with the foul air all the good and valuable heat which it contains and not supply new heat to the fresh air. If it were properly arranged we would take the heat out of the foul air before we exhaust it, turn it into the incoming fresh air, and so heat the incoming air by the heat of the outgoing warm air.

"This recovery of the heat is called the regenerative system of heating. We could do this by passing the outgoing warm air around the outside of the pipes which bring in the fresh air and so warm the latter by the former.

"By proper building construction the loss could be made slight, so that a very small amount of heat would warm the house; so small, indeed, that it would be economical to heat houses electrically; economical to own a house without a chimney, even though the price of electric energy must always remain many times greater than the price of coal, considering the same amount of energy."

How Gold Prospectors Work.

Whether gold occurs as an alluvial deposit or in a "reef," it is traced by the prospector with the help of a gold "pan." This is a shallow pan of light sheet iron with dished sides.

When "panning" for gold, the prospector places the sand, soil, or crushed rock into the pan, and adds water to wet the substance to be panned. Then, holding the pan in a tub or stream of water, he adds more water, and by a shaking motion works the heavy minerals to the bottom of the pan. By a lapping process he ejects the sand until there remains only concentrates, among which the gold may be distinguished by its color and relative heaviness.

There are rich gold reefs which shed gold very sparingly, and sometimes the gold is locked up in pyrite or other minerals, from which it is liberated by roasting or chemical treatment.

UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA EXTENSION SERVICE IN MEDICINE

Co-operates With State Medical Society to Help Local Physicians and Surgeons.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 3.—At the request of the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania the University of Pennsylvania, through its Graduate School of Medicine, has put into operation an extensive teaching plan by which physicians and surgeons of the entire State are receiving instruction in the latest developments of medicine and surgery. When the State Medical Society made this request, it was pointed out that Pennsylvania, being the pioneer in the establishment of Undergraduate and also Graduate Schools of Medicine, was best fitted to initiate this new movement in medicine.

Dr. George H. Meeker, Dean of the Graduate School of Medicine, is in charge of it. Officials of the State Medical Society, as well as leading physicians and surgeons throughout the State, are co-operating to introduce it into the various counties. As rapidly as the County Medical Associations are learning of this unusual form of service, they are co-operating to the fullest extent.

The plan now being pursued with such success is to arrange a schedule of clinics in the leading hospitals. Distinguished members of the medical faculty visit the hospitals, consult the histories of the most interesting surgical and medical cases, and then with all the local physicians and surgeons as students give clinical demonstrations in which they show the latest and approved methods of treatment. This plan, which the University of Pennsylvania has already demonstrated in many of the State's leading hospitals, frequently with more than one hundred physicians in attendance, is to be widely extended.

In commenting upon the reason for this course, Provost Josiah H. Penniman said that since the University of Pennsylvania had both the first Undergraduate Medical School in this country (founded in 1765), and the first Graduate School of Medicine in America, it ought to be the pioneer. So successful has its work become that physicians and surgeons have been coming to the University from all parts of the United States and foreign countries for postgraduate courses. It was recently visited by delegations from England and France to obtain new ideas for Post-Graduate Medical study in Europe.

In addition to this service, which the University is rendering gratuitously and as a public duty, Pennsylvania is maintaining much other extension work. This includes various stations of the Wharton School in the leading cities of the State. The University has also just held an international conference on Orthodontia, the regulation of the teeth, at which delegates came from all the leading dental schools of the United States, and from Canada, Ireland and England to acquaint themselves with the latest methods in the teaching of this subject. There has also just been concluded a Veterinary Conference for the Eastern States, a two weeks' course in Highway Engineering in co-operation with the State Highway Department of Pennsylvania and neighboring States.

Provost Penniman has also announced that the annual Schoolmen's Week Convention, in the interest of public school education, will be held at the University April 12, 13, 14. It is expected that fully 2500 delegates will be present.

The Summer School, which opens on July 2, announces a new course and demonstration schools in Rural Education, to be under the direction of Thomas S. Bock, who is director of Rural Education for the State of Pennsylvania.

WHY

Engagement Ring Has Become Recognized Institution

There wasn't much romance connected with the ring back in the Second century, B. C., when woman first began to flash it on the fourth finger of her left hand as a symbol of betrothal. The engagement ring originated as a "safety first" institution to hold fickle and forgetful man to his bargain from the time he made his first avowal of love until the wedding ceremony took place. As an ancient document reveals:

"There are many men who, forgetful of their plighted faith, defer the fulfillment of their nuptial contracts. Therefore there shall be a solemn declaration before witnesses and a betrothal ring given and accepted."

An old German formula reads:

"I give you this ring as a sign of the marriage which has been promised between us, provided your father gives with you a marriage portion of a thousand reichtalers."

During the Seventeenth century England chose to have the engagement ring adorn the thumb. The reason why English women wore them on their thumbs during the reign of George I. was because they were too large to wear on any other finger. The old Hebrew betrothal rings were almost as large as turnips, including in their superstructure reproductions of Solomon's temple or some other sacred building.

At one time the engagement ring consisted of three hoops looped together into what was known as a gimmel or puzzle ring. When the wedding took place one of these hoops was kept by the bride, one given to the groom and the third bestowed on an intimate friend who acted as witness to the ceremony.

ALL SEEK ROYAL WARRANTS

How Restrictions Have Been Placed on Privilege That Is Much Coveted in England.

The most important of all commercial honors is the royal warrant, and naturally it is much coveted, says London Tit-Bits.

The first thing a warrant holder has to learn is that his privileges are limited and what these limits are. A royal warrant of appointment to the king means that a holder of this document is entitled to use the royal arms over his shop and on his note paper.

He may not display the royal arms on a flag or use them as a trademark. If he uses them in his trade announcements he must be very careful to use the words "by appointment" beneath them. The arms should never be used without this wording.

The royal privileges are extremely carefully guarded, and if wrongfully used by the holder of a royal warrant, this would probably mean that the warrant would be taken away from the owner.

Very often, though, one sees the royal arms illegally used; for instance, it is no uncommon thing to see them printed on a poster at election time, or used as an inn sign. Even the use of the word "royal" is not allowed without special permission.

Unusually Endowed With Legs.

Following on the reports from Ontario of quadruped birds comes a story from Tawatinaw, Alberta, where a farmer has a four-legged chicken. The two extra legs in this case seem to have grown just at the end of the backbone and across each other just under the tail. It is a healthy bird and will eat and fight with the rest of the brood.

Froze Ice on Race.

The thermometer was registering about zero in Bellefonte on Easter Sunday, early in the morning, and ice was frozen across the race, being one of the few times it has been noticed during the entire winter. In fact, with a strong wind carrying the cold along, the weather was more noticeable perhaps than any morning during the winter.

OVER THE COUNTY

The Sarah E. Fryer homestead in the mountains two miles south-east of Coburn was purchased for $185 by the Greenbriar hunting club who will make it their permanent club. The property was sold by the overseers of the poor.

Probably the biggest farm sale held in Centre County this spring was that of Searson, of near Linden Hall. The total sales was $7,715. Three teams sold at an average price $500 and the lowest horse brought $205. Twelve horses were sold. Seventeen cows were bid in from $37 to $100.

Harold stover of Coburn, who was rendered unconscious when struck by a heavy tank that was being unloaded for the spinning mill at that place, was not seriously injured and is able to be about again. A chain broke while the tank was being unloaded from a car and this caused the accident.

Good roads in Centre County, leading to Bellefonte, are an asset that business men cannot overlook without losing considerably. Two roads that need your boosting are the one proposed through upper Bald Eagle valley and the Penn's valley road.

Crab Apple camp near Livonia was burned to the ground one afternoon recently when two members of the camp John F. Prowant and H. Eyer Spyker, of Lewisburg, used haste in getting supper The hot fire they built is said to have set fire to the chimney and eventually the cabin which was equipped, making a loss of approximately $1,000. The Lewisburg sportsmen had just placed a number of cans of trout in the mountain streams in that vicinity. They attempted to drive to their home after the blaze but got stranded near the "Halfway House" and it was 4.30 the next morning when they reached their destination.

Famous Boston Byway.

Pi alley, an ancient byway in Boston long considered public property by pedestrians, was posted the other day as a private way. It is a street cut from Newspaper row to the city hall. No one stopped using it, however. The corporation which posted the notice explained that it was done every 20 years in order to retain its property rights. The notice was kept up 48 hours and then taken down, not to appear again for another 20 years. Pi alley got its name because of the dumping into it of pied type from the newspaper composing rooms years ago. It was known as "Pie" alley to others because once upon a time a piece of pie and a cup of coffee could be obtained there for 5 cents.

CHRISTMAS AIR

"Of course," said Santa Claus to his reindeer, "I can't help but be cheery and gay and merry and happy just as I am, for I have so many, many friends. And it delights me so that all the children are so different.

"Many, Many Stockings."

"I love to have them all different. I wouldn't want all boys to be just alike in their ways and all girls alike in theirs.

"I think it is splendid that there are so many different kinds, perfectly, perfectly splendid.

"You all know that."

And the bells of the reindeer jingled as they went along through the cold, crisp, clear winter air.

Santa Claus had just finished his Christmas work. He had filled any number of stockings; oh, so many, many stockings! And he had trimmed trees and arranged presents. Gracious, but he had been busy!

"And how he had loved it all. Every bit of his work he had loved. He had seen the children asleep and he had left his work of unpacking the presents for many a look at his little sleeping friends. And now he was back and his reindeers were taking him home. He was calling out stories about the children to them as they went along, little notes he had received, and some of them had left him little notes wishing him a Merry Christmas, and that pleased him so much.

He told the reindeer, too, of how they looked and of Helen's hair tied up so tightly in rags so it would be curly on Christmas day. And it had looked quite quaint and pretty tied so close to her head.

Then Santa Claus began to sing:

"Heigh-ho, heigh-ho, the Merry Christmas season!
My children have made me the King of a Day,
With them as my subjects I can't help but be gay!
I chuckle and smile and laugh and I shout,
As I think of the numbers of children about!
I can't feel the cold with my heart so well warmed,
Heigh-ho, heigh-ho, the Merry Christmas season!"

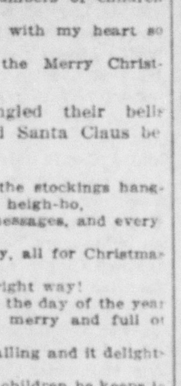
The reindeer jingled their bells more than ever and Santa Claus began to sing again:

"The Christmas and the stockings hanging up, heigh-ho, heigh-ho,
The letters and the messages, and everything just so,
All for Christmas Day, all for Christmas Day,
And that's the very right way!
For Christmas Day is the day of the year
When we all are so merry and full of good cheer,
And Santa comes a-calling and it delights him very much,
For then with all his children he keeps in such close touch.
And children are the best of all,
Santa Claus knows! Santa Claus knows!"

And so Santa Claus went on singing, and singing and the reindeer made music for his songs as they did when he sang about his work during the days and the nights before Christmas.

For they always wanted to make music for Santa's songs and before he started they wanted to let him know that they were ready. And on his way home they wanted to join in the gay merriment of the season.

"You know," said Santa Claus, "I am going to send a message to the children this very day. People think that there's a certain feeling in the air at Christmas time which is different from that at any other time. And it is different. For it is filled with the echoes of Santa's laughter and the music of the sleigh bells in the frosty, clear air, and that is what they really hear!



"Quite Quaint."

"Oh yes, the air is very different at Christmas time, and while everyone feels there is something wonderful about it unlike that at any other time of the year they do not know what it really means. And so I am telling them.

"They hear the echoes of Santa's laughter and of his singing and of the music of the bells of the reindeer. And the air is full of these sounds, and of the echoes of every Merry Christmas which Santa Claus shouts and sings and whispers, and Santa Claus wishes many Merry Christmases, I can tell you."

A Soft Answer.

The day is none too short, the night none too long; but all too narrow is the edge between.—Dallas Lore Sharp.

DESSERTS

A good dessert which may be passed on and become a layer cake is an economy. Bake a sheet of any plain white cake. Serve one-third or one-quarter cut in squares for the dessert with a good pudding sauce made as follows: Take two tablespoonfuls of flour, three-quarters of a cupful of sugar; mix well and add a half-cupful or more of any fruit juice at hand, or water with a tablespoonful of vinegar. Cook until smooth; add a tablespoonful of butter and a grating of nutmeg and pour over each serving, or pass at the table in a pitcher. The remainder of the cake may be cut in halves and put together with any desired filling, and iced or covered with chocolate, making a dessert and a cake from one recipe.

Lemon Rice Pudding.—Take one cupful of rice cooked in one quart of milk until tender, add the yolks of three eggs (two will do), the grated rind of a lemon and sugar to sweeten. Heap in a baking dish, cover with a meringue made of the egg whites, and two to three tablespoonfuls of sugar, and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Brown the meringue and serve either hot or cold. Bits of jelly may be added if desired, for a garnish.

Bread Pudding.—In spite of the derision which the good old bread pudding has had to endure, it still is a favorite in many homes. Take one and one-half cupfuls of milk, one-half cupful of sugar, two slices of bread buttered, one egg. Beat the egg and the sugar together until well-mixed; add the milk slowly, beating all the time. Place the buttered bread in a baking dish, pour over the milk and egg; the bread will rise to the top of the pudding dish like a crust. Allow it to stand one hour and then bake 15 minutes in a hot oven. Serve with top milk, vanilla and sugar to taste for sauce.

Hingham Pudding.—Mix together one-half cupful of seeded raisins, one-half cupful of molasses, one-fourth cupful of chopped suet, one-half cupful of water, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg. Add flour to make a drop batter and steam three hours.

CHAPTER ON SOUPS

For the beginning of a dinner or a luncheon or even a supper dish on a cool, crisp night, there is nothing that quite touches the spot as a good seasoned soup. If one objects to meat soups, there are the vegetable soups; if neither suits, there is still fruit.

Cherry Soup.—Take one quart of fresh or a pint of canned cherries, one quart of water; cook and strain. Return to the fire; add sugar and whole cinnamon and whole cloves to taste; thicken with two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, stirred smooth in a little cold water. Serve hot with croutons or with dumplings prepared of choux paste and cooked in the soup.

Philadelphia Fruit Soup.—Take one cupful each of dried apples, pears and raisins. Cover with warm water and soak for an hour, then add two cupfuls of cranberries which have been cooked until tender and pressed through a sieve. Cover with two quarts of cold water, boil for an hour, sweeten to taste, press through a sieve and thicken with two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch rubbed smooth with a little cold water. Cook until the cornstarch is well-cooked; serve either cold or hot.

Velvet Soup.—Cook one-half cupful of tapioca in six cupfuls of well-seasoned veal stock. Beat the yolks of three eggs and pour in the soup; stir until smooth and creamy; season with salt, pepper and grated nutmeg. Serve hot with croutons.

Brown Onion Soup.—Peel a dozen brown onions and fry until brown in butter. add two teaspoonfuls of sugar. When brown add four cupfuls of beef stock, bring to the boiling point and serve very hot.

Scotch Puree.—Put into a kettle one pound of mutton with the broken bones. Cover with three quarts of water and bring to the boiling point. Skim and simmer for one hour. Add six potatoes, two onions, one carrot cut fine, and simmer two hours longer. Season with salt, pepper and butter; simmer 30 minutes, strain through a coarse sieve, reheat and serve with croutons.

HOW

SINGLE DROP OF POISON CAN DEPOPULATE WORLD.

There is poison so powerful that all the people on earth could be killed by one-millionth of half an ordinary thimbleful. Drs. Jaques Bronfenbrenner and M. J. Schlesinger of Harvard university have found that the strength of the botulinus toxin, which occurs in spoiled vegetable food, is so great that the average man would die from a dose of 0.00000000000000001 cubic centimeter of it.

As there are 473 cubic centimeters in a pint, only an infinitesimal amount would be required to swamp the immigration authorities in heaven. One cubic centimeter would be enough to depopulate the whole earth with 999,999 parts left over.

Botulinus poisoning was first known as "sausage" poisoning and was detected after fatalities resulting from eating sausage, meats and fish. Recently this poisoning has been more common after the eating of decayed vegetable foods. It is caused by the germ bacillus botinus and unlike the toxin of diphtheria or lockjaw, it is deadly poisonous when introduced into the body by way of the mouth.

Contamination of foodstuff producing this poison is not common, and should such poisoning be present it is usually readily detected by the putrid odor of the food. If the poisoned food is boiled, it ceases to be harmful, while even when the poison is actually consumed, nature and an antitoxin may protect the individual.

GOES BACK TO OLD LEGEND

Why the French Throne Has Long Been Known as the "Throne of the Lilies."

The throne of France is called the throne of the lilies because of the old national emblem—the fleur-de-lis, a species of lily. The story of the adoption of the fleur-de-lis is partly historical and partly legendary.

According to history Clovis, king of the Franks, married the Princess Clotilde of Burgundy in A. D. 493 The young queen, who was a Christian, earnestly desired the conversion of her husband, who, like the most of the Frankish nation, was a heathen. In 496 the Franks and the Allemanni (Germans) were at war and at the battle of Tolbiac, near Cologne, Clovis was so hard pressed by his enemies that in desperation he called upon the God of the Christians for help, vowing that should he obtain victory he would himself become a Christian. The Allemanni were routed, and on Christmas day of the same year Clovis and several thousand of his soldiers were baptized.

The continuation of the story, which is legendary, is that on the eve of his baptism, an angel from heaven presented King Clovis with a blue banner embroidered with fleur-de-lis, which he was to adopt as the banner of France. However this may have been, it is a fact that from the time of Clovis to the French Revolution the kings of France bore as their arms golden lilies on an azure field.

How Python Was Moved.

At the London zoo gardens, a few days ago, a number of men moved as quickly as they could between the entrance and a snake's cage, carrying what looked like a large hose-pipe.

A second look showed that this was no hose-pipe, but a huge python, 28 feet long, doing its best to escape from the hands of the men. If it had escaped, it would have instantly coiled itself round one of them and crushed him to death. They kept tight hold of it, and all its wrigglings were in vain.

Tail first, it was carried, the bearers shuffling along, anxious to be rid of their perilous burden. Its head was muffled in a cloth, and kept muffled until all the rest of it had been pushed into the cage. Then the head went in, the doors were made fast, and the job of moving was over.

How Old Is a Cow?

Diagrams of the cow's teeth have been published frequently, but a good many people go wrong about it, nevertheless, by figuring that the heifer gets a new pair of permanent teeth every year, when, as a matter of fact, she gets a new pair every nine months, counting from the time she is a year and a half old. Of course, if the animal has horns it is easy. Count the number of rings, or wrinkles, and add two.—Farm Life.

Why Dog Lolls Out Tongue.

The dog sticks its tongue out when it pants, and this is an unconscious effort to increase the evaporating surface of the body. Heat required to evaporate perspiration caused by exertion cools the body.

MORE GOOD THINGS

A nice hot drink after a cold ride is the following:

Marshmallow Grape Juice.—Add the juice of a lemon to a quart of grape juice and let it come to the boiling point, adding a stick of cinnamon and half a dozen cloves, strain hot into glasses and add two marshmallows cut in quarters for each glass. If the grape juice is rich a cupful or more of water may be added. This makes a nice drink for skaters, as it can be served piping hot from a thermos bottle.

Codfish a la Mode.—Take one cupful of shredded codfish, two cupfuls of mashed potatoes, one pint of milk, two eggs well beaten, one-half cupful of butter, pepper and salt to taste. Mix and bake in a buttered baking dish twenty minutes.

Apples With Sausages.—Fry pork sausages until brown, keep hot on a platter and cook cored, unpeeled apples cut into half-inch slices in a little of the pork fat, sprinkling with sugar and seasoning while browning. For those who enjoy fried onions, these may be cooked in the fat first, or nearly cooked before the apples are added, then both used as a garnish around the sausage, making a most savory dish.

Cream Torte.—Beat six eggs, separating the whites from the yolks, add one cupful of sugar to the yolks, reserving the stiffly beaten whites for the last. Stir in lightly one-half pound each of dates and walnuts cut not too fine, and three tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs mixed with a teaspoonful of baking powder, then the whites. Bake in layers and put together with whipped cream.

Fig Pudding.—Cook one cupful of graham flour in two cupfuls of boiling salted water until free from the uncooked taste, then add one-half pound of chopped dates or figs, and one-half cupful of walnut meats cut in quarters. Cook another half hour, chill and serve with cream and sugar or with whipped cream.

"COME TO DINNER"

Let us have a good old-fashioned vegetable soup. From the market get a veal knuckle (have it cracked) and a good beef shank with meat on it. Cover with cold water after wiping the soup bones and meat and simmer for two or three hours before adding the vegetables. Add a carrot diced, a piece of celery root finely minced or a few stalks of celery, an onion or two, a half cupful of cabbage, the same amount of turnip and a few potatoes with a half-cupful of tomato or a fresh tomato cut into bits. Cook and season well with salt and pepper and serve when the vegetables are tender. The meat may be taken from the bones, finely minced, mixed with egg and cracker crumbs made into small balls and dropped into the soup.

Baked Round Steak.—Put a good thick cut of tender round steak in a baking pan after pounding into it as much seasoned flour as it will hold. Sprinkle with bits of butter or suet and add cold water to cover. Cover tightly and bake in a moderate oven for about two hours; add water as needed.

Bavarian Steamed Dumplings.—Soak a cake of compressed yeast in a cupful of lukewarm milk, adding a tablespoonful of sugar and a teaspoonful of salt. Sift a pint of flour into a bowl, add a cupful of milk, the yeast, a beaten egg and work in flour to make a soft dough. Cover the bowl and let rise for two hours in a very warm place. When double its bulk knead and mold into small biscuits. Let these rise for half an hour. Butter a round pan and set in the dumplings, brushing well with melted butter on top. Pour in enough milk to reach half way up on the dumplings; set into the oven on a brick to bake a light brown. Eat with a sauce of prunes.

Russian Tomato-Sardine Salad.—Arrange a bed of lettuce in a salad bowl. Peel four tomatoes of medium size, cut fine and mix with six sardines chopped and skinned and bones removed. Place on lettuce and serve with either mayonnaise or French dressing.

"ACTING UP"

A youngster in a surly mood
Refused to play or eat his food.
His father said, "I greatly fear
He needs some discipline severe."
The mother smiled and shook her head,
"Just let the child alone," she said
"Bad moments come to great and small.
He's merely 'acting up'; that's all.

"He may be weary of the day;
Weary alike of chorus or play;
Or weary, as we grown folks grow,
Because the hours are dull and slow.
In just a little while he'll be
A real boy, all gay and free,
Answering youth's eternal call—
He's merely 'acting up'; that's all."

They say that men are grown-up boys
Who play with more expensive toys,
So when a friend seems to forget
True friendliness, I shall not fret,
I'll wait until a brighter day
Dispels the shadows, chill and gray,
And patiently these words recall:
"He's merely 'acting up'; that's all."

PRESERVE RELICS OF CRIME

Grewsome Souvenirs in Scotland Yard's Museum, Which Are Barred From the General Public.

Scotland Yard's museum—a collection of relics of forgers, confidence tricksters, burglars and murderers—has just been reopened. It would be the most thrilling exhibition in London if it were open to the public. As a matter of fact, its exhibits would "give the game away" too much to the budding criminal were admission unrestricted, and only police officers and persons with a recognized professional interest in criminology are admitted, after due formality, to what is not inappropriately called the Black museum, says the London Times. The relics have been arranged by the curator, Inspector Fair. Plaster-cast heads of murderers are to be seen on a shelf surrounding each of the three rooms. There are souvenirs of famous murders—a case of poisons used by Dr. Neil Cream, who murdered several women; arsenical fly-papers, produced in the Maybrick and Seddon trials; Stinie Morrison's revolver, locks of hair from the head of Doctor Crippen's wife, Belle Elmore; the pestle with which an unknown man killed Miss Camp in a railway carriage; the masks worn by the two young Stratton brothers, who slew a woman at Deptford; and the knife with which Richard Prince killed William Terriss, the actor. Among a variety of gamblers' exhibits is a "put and take" top, with which the spinner always takes and never puts.

Pig Retrieved Ring.

While digging potatoes a Prince Edward Island woman lost her wedding ring, which was too big. The pigs were then turned into the garden to root for the potatoes that were missed. When the hogs fattened and were butchered the woman's ring was found on one of the pig's teeth.

A pair of very stunning ball earrings contain tiny dice in each ball. There is nothing about them to indicate the double life they lead.

An Architectural Triumph

By KAY P. ALLEN

(©, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The occasion of their first meeting was ludicrous, to say the least. Burton recalls it now with a half-hearted grin, and Lois dates all important events from the day that she first heard his knock at the back door of her cottage.

Wing, Burton's Japanese boy, was making a cake and discovered that he lacked the necessary cupful of sugar. Being very obliging, and incidentally fond of cake, Burton consented to go in search of some sugar. . Armed with a glass measuring cup, and feeling rather foolish, he started up the shore.

Lois saw him coming through the pines, a tall, bronzed fellow in soiled white duck navy trousers and blue jersey, and she fluttered to her mirror, instinctively.

"You want to borrow a cupful of sugar, I'll bet a cookie," she said, answering his knock.

He swept the small white hat from his head and handed her the cup, grinning.

"You win the cookie! Wing forgot to bring sugar from the village this morning, and we simply must have a cake for lunch."

"Of course you must," she agreed. "I met Wing this morning down at the wharf in the village waiting for the launch, and I gave him a lift. That's how I knew you wanted sugar. The poor man discovered his loss on the way up the lake."

Lois went into the tiny kitchen to fill the cup, and Burton seated himself on the rail.

"Now, why didn't I go to the village for the supplies instead of sending Wing?" he asked himself in disgust.

When there seemed to be no excuse for staying any longer, Burton took his precious sugar and rose to go.

"I'll return this sugar just as soon as I come back from the postoffice in the morning," he said. "It's awfully good of you to lend it to us."

"Oh, that's all right," protested Lois. "Don't be in a hurry to return it. Just send Wing up with it any old time."

Burton nodded in farewell and said, "I'll bring it up myself. Wing would probably spill it, or something."

"Perhaps he would, at that," smiled Lois. "But don't feel that you have to hurry."

Burton set out through the fragrant pine grove, carrying the cupful of sugar at arm's length, carefully and with great caution.

Lois happened to be at the wharf in her powerful little motorboat the next morning as Burton came down the path. Her surprise was real, but his was feigned, for he had watched the little red power boat for half a mile as it approached the village dock, and only left his hiding place around a bend of the path as she tossed the painter to a small, freckled boy.

"Good morning," she said, stepping up onto the wharf. "If you are going back up the lake, put your things in the 'Streak' and I'll be back in a minute."

Joyously, Burton tossed his bundles and his sweater into the boat and waited for her to come back from the boathouse with the basket of groceries that had been left there for her.

"Lovely morning, isn't it?" she said over her shoulder as they headed out across the lake. Burton agreed with her willingly.

"I've been up since dawn and have done a day's work already," he told her.

"Oh, you up here to work, too?" she said, surprised.

He nodded. "Working on some plans for a municipal hall my Dad is presenting to his native town."

This information threw a new light on Burton's personality and interested Lois exceedingly. She thought he must have very liberal ideas, and that his architectural plans must reflect them. That afternoon when he brought the rough draft of the hall for her criticism this opinion was confirmed.

"That's only a draft," he explained. "I'll have to work pretty steadily to finish the thing up in time to take it to New York next Saturday."

Lois opened her eyes wide in astonishment. "I should say you will. I know something about drafting, and I think you will perform a miracle if you get it done by then. Does it have to be in New York on Saturday?"

"Positively not later than midnight," answered Burton.

Lois thought swiftly. "I wonder if I can't help you with the elevations and blue printing? I know quite a lot about that sort of thing."

"Would you?" cried Burton, and the next moment they were deep in a sea of calculations and specifications.

Wing saw very little of Burton the next few days, as he moved his drawing boards and instruments to the cottage up the shore, and even ate his meals there, after helping to prepare them in the ridiculously little kitchen. The two worked doggedly until darkness and weariness compelled them to stop. Then Lois would bring out her guitar and sing soft Spanish things to him in the moonlight on the little porch or out on the quiet lake.

Saturday morning found them at work on the little porch as the sun rose, and Burton's face wore a look of desperate determination that meant success. Lois was sure. He had told her that the plans must be in his father's hands before midnight on Saturday to avoid a final separation between father and son. The elder Burton had decided upon this means of forcing his idle, carefree son to go to work. Since leaving college, only subdebs and golf tournaments had occupied the young man's attention, so that his father had grown disgusted.

"Cheerio," smiled Lois, waving a protractor. "We've got six hours to work yet."

"I'll have to take the launch that leaves in an hour," groaned Burton. "It's the only one till afternoon."

"Nonsense! I'll take you down the lake in the 'Streak'."

"You—you're a peach!" gulped Burton, and seized his T-square.

Campers along the shore watched the little red power boat scatter spray far out to each side as it shot through the water. A young man in a dark blue suit and straw hat, carrying a brief case and leather traveling bag, crouched behind the windshield to avoid the spray, and a girl in a scarlet blazer did wonders with controls and tiller, leaving the two small cottages far behind.

There was no one at the village wharf when they drew alongside. Burton tossed his bags up onto the wharf and turned to help Lois ashore.

"I don't think I'll stop, Ralph. You'd better hurry; it's train time, now."

"Hang the train! Lois, before I go, I—"

A minute later Lois was staring after him, her hand pressed to her startled lips. She whirled the starter thoughtfully, and went slowly back up the lake, to wait, with the memory of that kiss and the short sentence that accompanied it, until her architect returned.

FANCIFUL NAME FOR BIRDS

Many Explanations as to How Feathered Specimens Became Known as Birds of Paradise.

When the earliest European voyagers reached the Moluccas, or Spice islands, in search of cloves and nutmegs, which were then rare and precious spices, they were were presented with the dried skins of strange and beautiful birds. The Malay traders gave them the name of "Manuk dewata," or God's birds; and the Portuguese, finding that the skins had no feet or wings, and not being able to learn anything authentic about them, called the birds "Passaros de Sol," or Birds of the Sun; while the learned Dutchmen, who wrote in Latin, called them "Avis paradiseus," or Paradise bird. One writer in 1598 said that no one had seen these birds alive, for they lived in the air, always turning toward the sun, and never lighting on the earth till they died; for they had neither feet nor wings.

More than a hundred years later another account says that he had seen specimens at Amboyna, and was told that they came to Banda to eat nutmegs, which intoxicated them and made them all fall down senseless, when they were killed by ants. Down to 1760 no perfect specimen had been seen in Europe, and absolutely nothing was known about them.

Bullets Turned From Their Course.

At a rifle meeting in Switzerland it was discovered that the steel-jacketed bullets of the marksmen were swerved from their course by the influence of telegraph and telephone wires running alongside the range. Experiments were then made at Thun by placing four steel cables parallel with the range and about forty yards distant from it and sending a current of 8,000 volts through them. The effect, it is said, was to turn the bullets so far from their course that the deviation amounted to 24 yards on a range of 200 yards. The bullets on being taken from the targets were found to be magnetized. Next, on an artillery range of 3,000 yards the electro-magnetic influence was generated 200 yards in front of the targets and 40 yards to one side. The projectiles were swerved 14 degrees from a straight line.—Washington Star.

Gas Production at a Glance.

The question of the conservation of natural gas led the Smithsonian institution to construct a model which is exhibited in the national museum, showing all the steps between the production and utilization of this natural fuel. On account of the rapid decline in quantity of natural gas, the time is not very far off when many towns now using natural gas will have to use manufactured gas, and for this reason the Smithsonian institution has just completed and placed on exhibition a model showing how manufactured gas is made and delivered to the home, and has in preparation a bulletin covering in detail the future manufactured gas situation for the purpose of bringing within the experience of the layman the salient features of both the natural and manufactured gas situations.

Peculiar Milestone.

A recent picture showed one of three old milestones that are found on the old Bay road which runs from Boston to Portsmouth, N. H. Thousands of motorists pass it yearly, and the popular superstition is that it is a marker over the grave of a thief, whom our Puritan forefathers condemned to be buried, "where everybody might walk across his grave." There is a quaint inscription on the stone—written with the old-fashioned "s" which is like an up-to-date "f"—Job 30:23. "For I know that thou wilt bring me to death and to the house appointed for all living. 1710."

This milestone is to be found outside the old Wenham burying ground in Massachusetts, where it has stood for more than two hundred years.

LOVED TWO GIRLS, ONLY ONE WAY OUT

Hero of Chateau Thierry, Who Came Back Covered With Medals, Jumps Into Sea.

Los Angeles, Cal.—There was only one way out.

He was in love with two young women. One of them was a society girl, a thoroughbred, a wonderful, cultured, intelligent woman, one his parents would like to have him marry.

The other was but a child, sixteen years old, daughter of his father's gardener.

Ernest V. Campbell-Bennett, who saw service with the Eighteenth United States field artillery at Chateau

The Waves Rolled His Body on the Sands.

Thierry and who came back to California covered with medals, found it impossible to make a choice.

He was the son of E. J. Bennett, 611 One Hundred and Twenty-first street, Los Angeles, secretary and treasurer of the Woodward Bennett Packing company.

He thought he loved both maidens. And he could not choose. There was only one way out and that was out to sea.

A few weeks ago some of his clothing was found on the pier at Redondo beach. With them was a letter, 12 pages. Only one paragraph was made public.

"I have gone west. I think God will understand. I have long intended some day to swim until I was exhausted and could swim no more."

Yesterday the waves rolled his body on the sands at Redondo beach and his father identified it.

The society girl denied her engagement.

And the gardener's daughter fell on her knees and wept and said over and over again, "He was so good to me."

HAS WRONG MAN ARRESTED

Brooklyn Woman "Thought He Was My Missing Husband"—Doubtful in Court.

New York.—Mrs. May Harrison, Brooklyn, was certain James F. Pearce was her missing husband, Joseph Harrison, when she saw him playing cards a few days ago. She was not so sure in the Brooklyn family court, when her charge of desertion was heard before Magistrate Dooley.

She was asked flatly by Assistant Corporation Counsel Flanagan:

"Is this man your husband?"

"I'm almost sure," hesitating.

"But, is he your husband?"

"I can't swear to him out and out."

"Then why did you have him arrested?"

"Well, I thought then that he was Joe Harrison."

"The case is dismissed," said the magistrate. Pearce sighed and hurried from the courtroom.

STEALS DOGS FOR HIS BABES

Young Man Releases Most of Dogs in Kansas City Pound and Grabs Two for His Kids.

Kansas City, Mo.—Most of the dogs in the city pound were freed by a young man who appeared in a taxicab in front of the city pound, climbed over the main gate into the stockade and unwired the gate. The young man jumped into the taxicab, taking with him a couple of dogs that caught his fancy, and departed. He said he wanted dogs for his two babies.

Woman Routs Bandit With Trusty Hatpin

San Francisco.—As a weapon of defense Mrs. Horace O. Little is recommending to her friends the useful and at the same time deadly hatpin. Returning to her home, she was stopped by a footpad who demanded her money. Four jabs with her hatpin discouraged him and he took to his heels. She reported the incident to the police.

FIRST SLEIGH RIDE

Little Eugene wanted a Christmas treat more than anything else.

"I would rather take a sleigh ride than anything else," he said.

Now, as you can imagine, little Eugene had never lived in the country, for to take a sleigh ride is lots of fun but not just the very most special treat that most boys would ask for.

First of all there was the chance that there might not be snow, but snow came in plenty of time. And it was with joy that little Eugene looked at the snow-covered hills and the snow on the ground, which was becoming smooth and nice.

"It will seem more like Christmas than anything else," he said.

And the first time he heard sleigh bells he went almost wild with delight. "I hear them," he cried. "I hear them."

Now little Eugene was visiting in the country, but the people whom he was visiting did not own a horse and sleigh. They were going to do their best to see that he had a sleigh ride though.

And on the afternoon before Christmas Eugene was given his first sleigh ride.

Such a ride as it was, too! The trees were covered with snow for the most part, though the hemlocks had very little upon them.

For when the snow had been falling the hemlocks had been shaking about in their usual graceful fashion and the snow had not been able to cling to them.

The sun made the snow sparkle until a little later bright colors came in the sky and the sun went to bed dressed in his holiday suit of red. Eugene was sure he had put it on for the holidays and so he had, though Mr. Sun was also in the habit of wearing that red suit of his when he gave a birthday party which he did very often.

At either side of the sleigh there were bells attached and how they did jingle. And coming down the road behind them, all along the road, was another sleigh which made a sleigh-bell duet of jingles!

Sometimes where the snow had drifted brown patches of grass could be seen, but mostly everything was covered with snow. In the brooks and streams they passed there were ice and snow. Everything looked so nice and winter-like and so different from the city. Eugene loved it all.

"So Nice and Winter-Like."

It certainly was a treat. And Dolly, the horse, was very anxious to show Eugene that she would make it as much of a treat as she could.

She had heard him say that there would be sugar at the end of the ride and there had been sugar at the start of the ride. Oh yes, Dolly had some sugar.

So Dolly shied at an automobile which, of course, she never did as a rule. But she thought it would be fun to do this for the little city boy. Little city boys did think such funny things sometimes. Dolly had heard some of the questions they asked when they came to the farm.

And Dolly even pretended to be a little frightened at the train when it hurried by!

The sleigh was called a cutter and what fun it was to ride so close to the ground and what a crisp, pleasant sound it made when it hurried along pulled by Dolly, the horse.

They passed by a well which was used by everyone in one small village. A community well it was called and little Eugene was surprised to hear that it didn't freeze. He had heard that plumbers were always busy in the country fixing pipes which had frozen.

But it was explained to him that it was so deep in the earth it couldn't freeze and that the water drained back after it had been pumped. Oh no, that well never froze.

But little Eugene almost did. And oh, how glad he was to get back to the fire again.

He had had a perfect Christmas treat, though, and he left a note for Santa Claus by the chimney that night, for he knew Santa would like to hear of the treat of his first sleigh ride—his great Christmas treat!

Not Homesick.

"Don't you ever get homesick?"

"No," replied Senator Sorghum. "After being heckled a few times by my constituents I'm perfectly satisfied to reside in Washington, D. C."—Washington Star.

THE HOME HILLS

After long days when I come
Once more from far roving, home,
While I watch with eager eyes
Old loved landmarks, friendlywise,
Sudden bursting into view
Sharp etched on the skies' clear blue
Lo, the hills of home arise.

Always 'round the curve they lie
Waiting hid as I draw nigh,
'Till I pass the angled bend,
And the last long slope ascend,
And the shortening road runs straight;
There to welcome me they wait—
Hills of home and journey's end.

Hoofbeats quickening on the trail—
Grind of train wheels on the rail—
Motor swerving sharp and sheer—
Steamboat reaching for the pier—
Curve or headland, break or bend
I must pass, and at the end
Stand the home hills, clean and clear.

Thus when fate my spirit brings,
To the ordained end of things,
I shall come as now I come
Through far spaces wearisome,
Through the shrouding veils that lie
Twixt time and eternity,
Till there blaze against the sky,
Gold and jade—the Hills of Home.
—C. T. Davis in the Arkansas Gazette.

POOR REWARD FOR SERVICES

Reprimand Only Thanks English Sailor Got for Extending Domains of the British Empire.

Eighty years ago a little boy named Moresby went to sea in one of Queen Victoria's ships as a midshipman. Thirty years afterwards he was a naval captain in command of a ship, and he was sailing off New Guinea, which is to the north of the continent of Australia.

As he had nothing else to do he did some exploring, and before long he discovered as many as 160 islands that had not before been on any map. He charted 600 miles of coast-line previously unknown, and he annexed part of New Guinea to the British Empire.

All the reward he got was a reprimand from the admiralty, which said he ought not to have done it, but "as they did not think he meant to do it they would say no more about it."

The explorer has now died, an admiral, at the age of ninety-two, and before he died he did win some recognition of the service he had done. He was the only sailor in the British navy who ever had a ship named after him in his lifetime. The destroyer Moresby torpedoed a battleship at the battle of Jutland, and also sank a submarine.

Unbreakable Glass.

According to recent reports, a Bohemian inventor, after 13 years of research, has succeeded in producing unbreakable glass. At a recent demonstration, it is said, plates and vessels of the material remained whole when thrown to the ground from a height of 12 feet. Meat was roasted on a thin glass plate over an open fire at a temperature of 750 degrees F. Tin was melted in a glass pot, and nails were driven in a piece of hardwood, using a piece of glass for a hammer.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

MIGHT LOSE HIS JOB

"When it comes to love, I wouldn't give a thought to how much a man is making."

"Neither would I, dear. What would primarily interest me would be how much he had already made. There's no use taking chances.

Many Products of Wood.

As dependent as were our ancestors on wood, little did they dream of the possible products to be derived from that substance. The field that the chemist is developing in wood derivatives is indeed vast. When the commercial processes have been generally established, little wood waste may become the rule and the total value of a crop of wood per acre will become far greater.—W. J. Morrill, State Forester, Colorado Agricultural College.

Rats Had Eaten Savings.

Hiding her savings for years in a disused wine cellar filled with empty bottles, to keep them from her drunken husband, a Paris woman found when she went to get her hoard to pay for a house she was buying, that there was nothing but a few shreds of what had once been banknotes, rats having devoured everything. She had been saving up for fifteen years.

Chickens Good Mousers.

An Ontario reader of the Toronto Globe says that a villager near his place had some six-months-old Plymouth rock pullets which were excellent mouse catchers. Last fall while husking corn, a mouse ran from the corn stock. It was soon overtaken by one of the pullets which killed and devoured it. This was only one of the many mice caught by the same pullet during the husking season.

Truly Patriotic Citizen.

A Tacoma (Wash.) resident who must go down to fame under the name of John Doe because of government regulations, sent the collector of internal revenue a check for $6.06. "I do not owe an income tax, but I do believe every man in the land should help support the government, so here's my bit," he wrote.

ANT-EATERS MAKE TROUBLE

Their Homes Burrowed in the Sand Frequently Bring Disaster to the Rider on the Veldt.

The ant-eater of South Africa is often found on the veldt, far removed from wooded lands, and here he makes his bed in a hole just under the sand. It is not unusual to see a Boer riding across the veldt suddenly fly from his mount, while the horse sinks down to his shoulders, indicating that he has placed his feet on the spot above the burrowed home of an ant-eater.

His habit is to find a large ant-heap and to fashion a round hole at the base, whence his long tongue will penetrate all the corridors and lick off the antish inhabitants. Mining engineers and others trekking across the veldt often make ovens of these holes.

NOT "INVENTED" BY SCOTCH

Devotees of Game of Golf Learned Something New Concerning Their Favorite Pastime.

We were golfing one day when one of the foursome remarked: "We certainly owe a debt to the Scotch for golf."

"Why to the Scotch?" I queried.

"Because they discovered it, invented it, so to speak. Didn't you know that?" I was asked in astonishment.

"No, I didn't know it," I replied. And when I reached home, bringing my friends with me, I said to them, after dinner: "Now, let me show you fellows something apropos the Scotch 'discovering' golf. Read the beginning of this article on 'Golf' in the Encyclopedia Britannica, an English publication, which would most likely have credited the game to the British Isles if history permitted, wouldn't it?"

"First played by the Dutch," read my friend. "Well, what do you know about that?" And then, from another article, "Brought to Scotland from Netherlands by two Scotchmen." And then, of course, there followed: "Golf, a Dutch game! Well, I didn't know that!"—Chicago Daily News.

Monkey Put Up Good Fight.

The extraordinary sight of a monkey fighting a bull has been witnessed at Hounslow, England. The bull, while being taken to the slaughter house, escaped from the keepers and dashed off, sending pedestrians in all directions. It made straight for a barrel organ, on which a monkey was performing with a wand, and the grinder rushed to safety. Jack, however, stuck to his post, and struck the bull with the wand before being tossed into the air. The monkey returned to the attack, and made a fierce onslaught on the bull with its teeth and nails. This disconcerted the bull, who, catching sight of its keeper, who was in pursuit, fled to Isleworth, where it dropped exhausted. The monkey was uninjured.

Queer "Post Office."

Of all quaint post offices the one that used to serve the district of Barr, in Argyllshire, Scotland, which was deficient in almost every post amenity was probably the most quaint. There was neither postman nor postmaster, neither counter, nor postbox, no delivery. It was all alone in the hills three miles from anywhere, and consisted of a slit in a rock closed by a well-fitting stone. A shepherd who was going that way from the office at Drimnin dropped the letters, a chance shepherd finding himself near took them out and delivered them.

Real Football "Fan."

There are few men who would walk 630 miles to witness a football match or matches. One such enthusiast, however, exists. He tramped from Cardiff to Newcastle to see the game between Newcastle United and Cardiff. He then walked to Liverpool to watch his team play there. Roughly, the distances are: Cardiff to Newcastle, 340 miles; Newcastle to Liverpool, 123 miles; Liverpool to Cardiff, 170 miles.—London Mail.

Rescuer of Livingstone Dies.

Sir John Kirk, pioneer African explorer and the second white man to see Victoria Falls, died at Seven Oaks, Kent, on January 15, aged eighty-nine. Once, on the Zambesi river, Sir John saved the life of Livingstone by shooting a hippopotamus that was charging Livingstone's craft.—Scientific American.

Body Enclosed in Cement.

An unusual consignment was received in Norfolk, Va., when the body of a Peruvian senator arrived there on the steamer Radames. It required twelve men to lift it. The body was inclosed in cement, and to enable the undertaker to handle it properly, the cement had to be broken with hammers and removed piece by piece.

The body was cold and stiff, bent with the feet touching the ground and suspended by a rope tied about the neck and one end fastened to a small limb said to be not more than 5 feet from the ground, indicating that the suicide had been planned and carried out without any person to interfere. In fact, Brown had been missing from his home for several days and his disappearance caused alarm among his kin and friends, who had instituted a search. Finding of his body, however, was purely accidental.
